

Choir Singer

The Choir Singer is a person of deep faith that uses song as the primary method to show reverence for the divine. They see music not just as entertainment, but as a path to enlightenment and a way to commune with the spiritual realm. These singers are the ultimate form of support for any temple and the community the temple serves. They are the lifeblood of ceremonies, guiding the congregation through rituals with their song in harmony with the rhythm of blessings, incantations, and prayers. Besides a knowledge for music some of these musical acolyte's may have deep understanding of ancient languages, deciphering forgotten verses and breathing new life into dusty hymnal books and scrolls. Their knowledge ensures the correct flow of ceremony, honoring tradition and safeguarding the temple's spiritual heritage.

Feature: Inner Choir

As a Choir Singer you have long helped grace the halls of a temple with harmonious sounds of song and this experience has stuck with you. No matter where you go you have a very faint song that is coming from deep in your heart, mind or even soul. Perhaps it's the side effects of years of training and you have developed a ringing in your ear. Perhaps it could be a form of madness or maybe something much more divine that has bestowed onto you a gift.

Your inner choir is very sensitive to outside influences. You know immediately if a Detect Thoughts, Zone of Truth, Scrying or Charm Person spell has been cast on you or any living creature within 30ft of you. You are immune to any charm effects that are being made by music either from an instrument, magical effect or song. The inner choir protects you but also aims to guide you through the world of music. If you spend one minute listening to any performance you can identify the tune without fail. If you use the Help action to assist with another characters Performance skill check, add half of your Performance skill to the roll.
